

It's the end of the world as we know it, and I feel cozy.

I don't know what thrills me more... The idea of walking around in a blanket, or walking around in a blanket with an LED booklight. Products like this evoke so many conflicting emotions, I dunno where to begin. Combine a brilliant concept, with the benefits of comfort, economy and environment, with something that is outright disturbing, in a Jonestown sort of way. Could this be how the illuminati is preparing us all for 2012, by donning us all with sacrificial robes? No bloodstains, no problem!